The End of the Road Motel was born from an idea on a five-day holiday break from the Sunshine Coast, when your host Doug Scouller, took off to find a place to escape the rat race.

After traveling for two days and 2200 kms, he discovered Karumba Point and a large block of land with a very old and run down Prawn Processing Plant for sale. These premises were also used as a Butcher Shop, a Bakery and a dwelling for many years.

The Prawn Processing Plant was built in the early 60s. The large red compressor still kept on site is a major part of this history and a real relic from the past. Generator driven electric motors ran the Bell compressor which in turn was able to snap freeze 16T of prawns per hour. In peak prawning season approximately 30 people worked 24 hours a day processing prawns.
